Organizer: Dean S. Dorn, CSU Sacramento

Presenter: Eric Cain, Director, Producer, Writer, Oregon Public Television: "The Oregon

Story: Three Days at Crane"

[Situated in the high desert of southeastern Oregon, Crane Union High serves some of the most remote homes and ranches in the state. Crane serves a district of some 7500 square miles and draws its student body from as far as 150 miles away, yet has fewer than one hundred students in an average year. This is one of the oldest residential public schools in the U.S., and its student body, like the school itself, is unique. For three long days, our camera crews recorded student life at and around the school and supplied small video cameras to the students to shoot additional footage of their own. The result is this "snapshot" of a small and fascinating community.]

Organizer: Dean S. Dorn, CSU Sacramento

Presenter: Eric Cain, Director, Producer, Writer, Oregon Public Television: "The Oregon

Story: Country Doctors, Rural Medicine"

[Today's country doctors are some of the finest health-care professionals in the state, often practicing a sort of whole-person care that's rarely seen in urban medicine.

Yet this sector is in big trouble in rural Oregon. Doctors, nurses, dentists and other providers are in critically short supply here. And as rural populations grow older and poorer, the task of recruiting medical professionals gets ever more difficult. The quality of health care itself may be in jeopardy, and this program confronts these problems head-on.

This Is What Free Trade Looks Like: The NAFTA Fraud in México, the Failure of the WTO, and the Case for Global Revolt Organizer and Presider: Amory Starr, Chapman Univ.
[This Is What Free Trade Looks Like examines México's experience with NAFTA as a basis for understanding the impacts of other free trade agreements (FTAs), such as the WTO and the FTAA, on developing countries, on farmers, youth, and the poor. Designed for educational use as a companion film to the Seattle WTO protest film, This Is What Democracy Looks Like. This Is What Free Trade Looks Like contextualizes growing resistance to free trade policies. The film concludes by introducing some specific proposals that are points of consensus among Global South social movements as they assert "another world is possible".]

168) Video Session: Social Issues in Oregon: Agricultural Workers
Organizer: Dean S. Dorn, CSU Sacramento

Presenter: Eric Cain, Director, Producer, Writer, Oregon Public Television: "The Oregon Story: Agricultural Workers"
[Agricultural workers have played a significant role in Oregon's economic success for more than 140 years, but their contributions have gone largely unrecognized. And while these farmworkers, cannery workers and tree planters are vital to the state's economy, few know much about these peoples' occupations and experiences, or even the people themselves. Combining extensive archival material with personal accounts, scholarly commentary and an original sound track, "The Oregon Story: Agricultural Workers" portrays the diverse history of this sometimes-migrant population from the late 1800's to the present day. Northwest Regional EMMY - "Best Director"]
